THE NAVY LEAGUE WILL ADVOCATE MERCHANT MARINE

Want American Ships to Have Free Passage Through Panama Canal

The following self explanatory letter was received by Mr. J. H. Dow, Esq., chairman of Rangers' Section, Navy League:

J. H. Dow, Esq., Chairman of Rangers' Section, Navy League, Portsmouth, N. H.

Dear Sir:—The Navy League has repeatedly passed resolutions in convention in favor of general measures having for their object the restoration of the American Merchant Marine. The League stands for legislation to encourage a strong Merchant Marine as a necessary auxiliary to an efficient Navy.

Among the several measures suggested for the restoration of the American Merchant Marine are the proposals that American ships in coast-wise trade shall be exempt from canal dues, and that the tolls imposed on any other American vessels passing through the canal shall be paid by the government. Certain foreign governments have already provided, that vessels under their flag shall have canal dues paid out of the public treasury.

Many of our members who remember that foreign countries are paying fifty million dollars a year in subsidies to their shipping, that the country is spending four hundred million dollars on the Panama Canal, and that the country each year spends twenty-five million or more towards the deepening of the rivers and harbors, the benefit of which has largely been for foreign shipping, are of the opinion that the Navy League

EUGENE PRINCE IS MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY

Congress Asked to Grant Him Right of American Citizenship

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Representative Gardner today introduced a special joint resolution to give American citizenship to Eugene Prince, who, although he comes from an old Massachusetts family, is really "a man without a country." The facts in his case which are unique in the annals of the State Department are as follows:

The Prince family dating from 1641 Eugene Prince's great-grandfather Henry Prince, born in Salem, was an officer in the United States Navy and married Ruth Hardy Ropes of Salem. As a young man, George Henry Prince, grandfather of Eugene Prince, left the United States for St. Petersburg to represent his relations, the firm of W. Ropes and company, exporters of petroleum. He married a Russian woman and had six children. The fifth child, John Henry Prince was born at St. Petersburg, Nov. 20, 1862. He has always resided in St. Petersburg, representing American firms. He has retained his American citizenship to this day, and is registered by the Russian Government as an American citizen doing business in St. Petersburg under a "billet de sejour." His wife is a Russian.

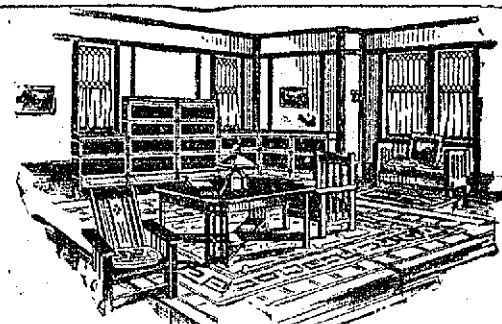

Eugene Prince, his son, has been employed in the offices of the International Harvester Company in Moscow. He came to America a short while ago to take up his citizenship and to enter the Chicago office of the International Harvester Company.

Under the Revised Statutes, Eugene Prince cannot be recognized as an American citizen, as his father never resided in this country. On the other hand, under the Russian law he cannot be recognized as a subject of the czar, so he has no standing in the eyes of any Government in the world. He cannot secure a passport as an American citizen nor can he secure a passport as a Russian subject.

There is only one precedent for the granting of American citizenship by special act of Congress. Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, Gen. Grant's daughter was admitted to citizenship of the United States by special act in 1898.

Mr. Prince will next week file his declaration of intention to become a naturalized citizen, but if the special act passes, of course, it will not be necessary to him to be naturalized.

Mr. Prince is a relative of the late John C. Ropes and Prof. James Hardy Ropes, the two noted historians.

HORSE DASHES MADLY THRO' CITY STREETS THIS NOON

Sleigh Caught in Car Tracks and the Occupants Are Thrown Out

Congress and Market streets were the scene of a lively runaway this noon, at a time when many persons were either going to or returning from their noon day meal, and it seems miraculous that no one was injured during the progress of the runaway.

The horse belonging to Thomas Lynsky attached to a light sleigh containing Walter Lynsky and another man, was coming up Congress street towards Market square. When in front of Rufus Woods' express office, in attempting to turn out to avoid some teams the runners of the sleigh got caught in the tracks of the Portsmouth Street railway and the sleigh overturned. Both of the occupants were thrown out and before they could recover themselves the horse was off at a break neck speed.

In front of Frank W. Knight's store he left a portion of the sleigh and in turning into Market street, the animal took the sidewalk in front of Lewis B. Staples' store causing pedestrians to seek the shelter of friendly doorways. Here one body of the sleigh came in contact with an iron post and the horse freed himself from it.

This did not stop his running for he continued down Market, up Bow, through Chapel to the lower end of Daniel street where he was caught by one of the workmen employed at the Portsmouth Brewing company.

Walter Lynsky had his wrist slightly injured when thrown out and his companion escaped with a few bruises.

The horse suffered a few cuts around one of his hind hoofs. The sleigh was wrecked beyond repairs.

That none of the pedestrians on the streets at the time of the accident were injured seems indeed fortunate.

WANT GOV. WILSON TO SPEAK; INVITED HERE BY THE MAYOR

If Mayor Badger gets a favorable reply to a telegram he forwarded on Friday, the people of this city will hear Gov. Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey in this city on January 25.

His honor wired the governor on behalf of the Y. M. C. A., extending him the invitation to address the people on the occasion of the business men regular meeting now being conducted by this organization. In the library the governor is due in Concord on January 26, and the plan is to have him come to Portsmouth the evening of the 25th, leaving here the following day for the state capital.

If Mayor Badger is successful it will be a big card for the association and a chance for the people to see and hear one of America's leading men.

Henry C. Long of Boston, who lectured at the Merrill lecture course here, in his discourse stated the possibilities of the shipping future of New Hampshire. Mr. Long, who is the author of the $3,000,000 harbor bill, and also the mover of the "Greater Boston" movement, is confident that there will be the beginning within a year of the shipping facilities up the Merrimack from Newburyport, Mass., to Concord, and that the beginning will be the first step for a digging of a canal and lock system. It was there instituted it would be easy for the shipping to inland places and they could be reached by water instead of by rail as now. It would also be easier, so he stated, in importing from Canada. Many cities and towns along the banks of the Merrimack would receive a boom.

The electric cars from here to Portsmouth are now running all the way to that city, after being tied up for a few days this week owing to the storm. Immediately after the storm they ran only as far as Greenland, thus affecting the Portsmouth public more than it did the public here, as Stratham people could reach Exeter and the school children and working people were not very badly affected except a delay of about half an hour on the day after the storm.

Instructor Moses B. Perkins of the Phillips Exeter Academy will conduct the services at the West End hall Sunday afternoon. Mr. Perkins is at present busily engaged in arranging the list of speakers, who will speak at the Sunday evening meetings of the Christian Fraternity of the academy. Not all of his dates are filled, but he is in negotiations with many of the prominent men of the country and the persons who will be heard this winter will be ones of discussion.

Michael Hallinan has purchased from Charles E. Robinson the Moore property on Garfield street.

Division 3, Ancient Order of Hibernians, will present its fifth annual entertainment and dance at the town hall on the evening of Jan. 26. The play will be the three act drama, "Faugh a Ballagh" or "The Wearing of the Green." Music will be furnished by the Columbian orchestra.

The Frank E. Rollins, U. R. K. of P., has changed its date for its annual military ball from Feb. 16 to Feb. 15, the anniversary date of the blowing up of the Maine, and the music is to be by the Sixties Regiment orchestra of Lynn, Mass.

A snowslide yesterday carried away the chimney at the First Congregational church, taking it off with the roof. The bricks fell to the ground, but nobody was hurt, as the church yard is some distance from the sidewalk. The janitor was in the building when he was ready to make a fire in the furnace for heating the building for the Sunday services. Masons will rebuild it in time for Sunday.

Roof timbers are being put up on the new dormitory of the Phillips Exeter Academy, the work being speedily advanced of late. The Davis library is also well advanced. Mary Francis, daughter of Prof. William A. Francis of the Phillips Exeter Academy, is substituting on the faculty at Robinson Seminary this week owing to the illness of one of the members. Miss Francis is a graduate from Wellesley.

In view of the hearing before the tax commissioners held at Concord this week and which all of Exeter's selectmen attended, Ernest G. Templeton of the board publicly states that "in Exeter, as the clerk of the commission intimated, there is little fault to be found with the valuation of real estate. It is probable that more intangibles are voluntarily given for taxation here than in any other place in the state, and it is safe to assume that a strict enforcement of the law will result in a reduction of the amount of personal property held by residents and a consequent increase in the tax rate."

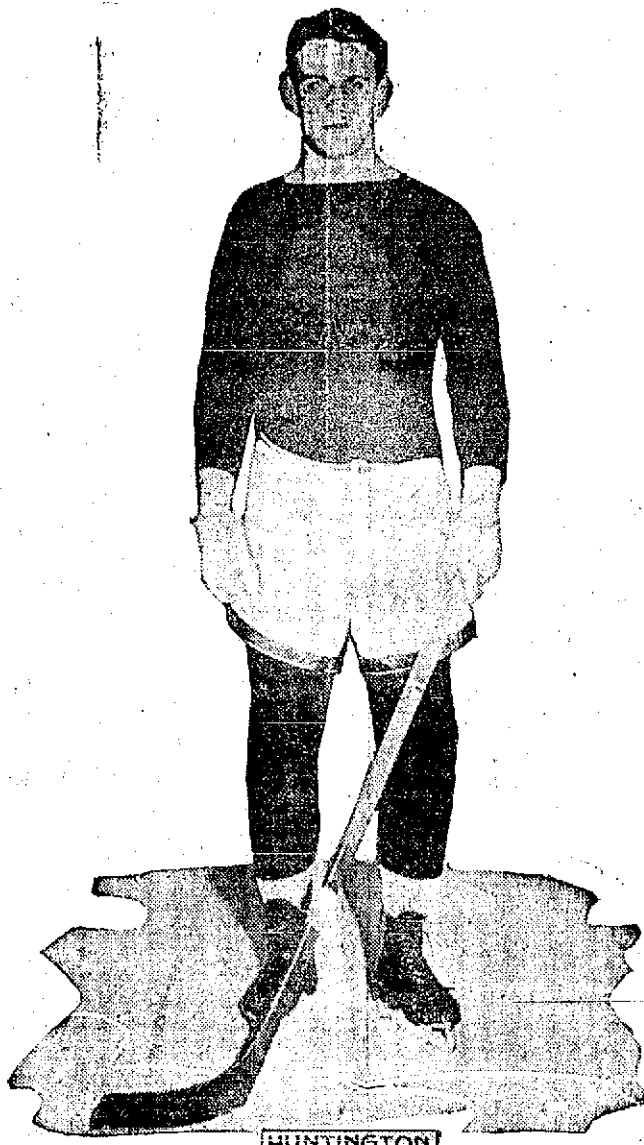

BITS OF SPORT

Sessions of Dartmouth leads all players in the intercollegiate basketball league in points scored to date with a total of 68. He has thrown seventeen field goals and twenty four from fouls. Heath of Princeton is next with forty three points.

Manager McGraw of the Giants says that Mathewson has regained all his speed of a year or two ago and will enter the 1912 season with as much on the ball as ever. In McGraw's opinion the Cuban trip which "Big Six" took was just the necessary stimulus to revive his awoke and make him the greatest twirler in the business again.

"Ty" Cobb has picked twenty ball players, who in his opinion are the greatest ever. But "Ty" was modest enough to leave his own name out of the list. What a yell he would sent up if a baseball writer had picked the crowd and had left his name out. But if "Ty" put in his own name the fans would say that he was "swelled head." About six of one, and half a dozen of the other.

A good story is going the rounds in sporting circles in New York. It seems that Manager McGraw announces that he has given much thought to the hiring of a chef to supervise the food prepared for the Giants while on the spring training trip. Mathewson and some of the

HUNTINGTON

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 20—Fred Huntington, captain of the Harvard ice hockey team and who played center and fullback on the football team, is Harvard's strong man. He heads the list of the ten strongest men in the university for the first half of the year, made up from tests participated in by more than 500 students. Huntington's total of 1,303 points, how ever, is ten points under the record of F. H. Leslie, who headed the list last year and who is second this year with 1,309. Leslie and Tudor Gardner, who is third with 1,132, and H. B. Gardiner, who is tenth with 1,040, were also members of last year's football eleven. Huntington is one of the best hockey players ever turned out at the university. He plays cover point on the team.

older players profess to see much merit in such a procedure, recalling cases where games have been lost on account of eating improper food and even cases where sickness resulted from the serving of rich foods. It is old that Josh Devore, the linguist of the team Manager McGraw's stand on "dietetics," replied: "Well, I am willing to try it, but I'll be that we can't work it more than twice on Pittsburgh or the Cubs before the whole league gets on to it and they will be framing a scheme to beat the play."

MORSE IS JOINED BY HIS HAPPY WIFEPlans for Future Depend on His Condition

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 19—This is the happiest day of my life," said Mrs. Charles W. Morse, upon her arrival in Atlanta today from Washington. I didn't know anybody could be so happy before.

"I am sincerely grateful to everybody who has aided in bringing about the freedom of Mr. Morse. I am afraid he won't have very long to enjoy it, however, unless there comes a quick change for the better.

"Plans? Well, we haven't made any; it is too early yet. It all depends, of course upon the change in his conditions and the advice given us by his physicians.

"He will stay at the fort for some few days to come at least. We hope, however, that he will soon be in condition to be moved to a private sanitarium."

Mrs. Morse reached Atlanta at 5:15 o'clock this afternoon and was met at the terminal station by Mrs. Seeley, the wife of the editor of the Georgia who has been her friend ever since she first came to Atlanta two years ago to start the fight for her husband's freedom.

In an automobile the two were whisked away to the fort, where only the nurses stand guard now. The federal guard having been removed on the order of the warden.

Silently and quickly Mrs. Morse slipped into the room, where her husband was, too weak to do more than barely notice things about him, unable to move without assistance and placed in his hands the official papers of his release signed by the President and turned over to his wife as a special agent of the Government for this one service.

No definite plans have as yet been made for Morse's future. He is so weak that everybody except members of his family have been refused admittance. The only exception has been one or two Federal prison officials, who went to see him yesterday and today to get his signature to some necessary papers.

It is said that his friends wait the coming to Atlanta of Fred Seeley, who is expected to arrive tomorrow. At that time they will hold a conference for the future and will see what his physicians think will be the best for him.

Some there are who hope that freedom may bring him a restoration of health, but the doctors agree that the estimate of one year more is liberal.

PEOPLE'S OPINIONS

Editor Herald:—

The move on the part of the public works in paying more attention to the waste of water is one in the right direction. There is too much of our water allowed to flow from the pipes of tenement houses simply because some one will not take trouble to shut it off in the cellar.

For all around waste, the North End district is in the lead. One can judge from the fact that the inspector in hunting for a loss of water in a house on Russell street last summer discovered a flat iron tied to the chain of a flushing tank to keep the water continually flowing into the tank for cooling purposes. Further examination led to the discovery of a dozen bottles of beer in the tank from which tenant "cool" quenched his thirst during the day. Is it any wonder that the water department are advocating meters for houses as well as manufacturing plants.

should strongly advocate the proposed measure.

The Annual Convention and Dinner which will be held in Washington February 22nd and 23rd, and the question of Panama tolls, their effect on the Merchant Marine, and their connection with the building up of a naval auxiliary fleet, will be one of the important subjects to be considered there. I therefore bring the matter to your attention that you may not only give it careful consideration yourself, but take some means to sound the local sentiment of your state, in order that any action taken by the League may be representative of the general convictions of the people of the whole country. Already the foreign shipping interests are displaying an active opposition to these measures, which should be receded by the American people themselves.

The commercial feature of Merchant Marine legislation may be outside the scope of our organization, but an adequate number of vessels available as naval auxiliaries in time of war are indispensable to an efficient navy. If any of proposed measures will supply a number of naval auxiliaries, they should have the earnest consideration of every Navy League member.

I hope to hear from you at your early convenience.

SOME CAN

But Student Had to Quit

Some people are apparently immune to tea and coffee poisoning—it you are not, Nature will tell you so in the ailments she sends as warnings. And when you get a warning, heed it or you get hurt, sure. A young college student writes from New York:

"I had been told frequently that coffee was injurious to me," (tea is just as bad) "and if I had not been told, the almost constant headaches with which I began to suffer after using it for several years, the state of lethargic mentality which gradually came upon me to hinder me in my studies, the general lassitude and in disposition to any sort of effort which possessed me, ought to have been sufficient warning.

But I disregarded them till my physician told me a few months ago that I must give up coffee, or quit college. I could hesitate no longer, and at once abandoned coffee.

"On the advice of a friend I began to drink Postum, and rejoice to tell you that with the drug in coffee (the same drug—caffeine—is found in tea) removed and the healthful properties of Postum in its place I was soon relieved of all my ailments. The headaches and nervousness disappeared entirely, strength came back to me, and my complexion which had been very, very bad, cleared up beautifully.

Better than all, my mental faculties were toned up, and became more vigorous than ever, and I now feel that no course of study would be too difficult for me." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pages.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

NOTICE TO WATER TAKERS

On account of the extremely cold weather of the past ten days, faucets have been allowed to run freely to prevent freezing. This practice must be stopped and the water shut off in the cellar when in danger of freezing or the pumps, which are at present greatly over-taxed will be unable to do the work demanded of them and a loss of pressure will be the result.

MILL OWNERS REFUSE TO GRANT INCREASE

Situation in Lawrence Critical and Co. G of Gloucester Ordered for Strike Duty.

President Wood of the American Woolen Co., issued a statement to the striking operators at Lawrence, on Friday evening, in which he made known the decision of the mill owners to refuse to give the operators the raise necessary to make up the extra two hours a week. His reason was that the business was so poor that they could not afford it. He counselled the operators to return to work and promised that the mill owners would grant an increase in pay as soon as the business warranted it. The situation is now more critical than ever and orders were issued last night for Co. G of Gloucester to go to Lawrence this morning for strike duty. It is feared that the present force will not be able to handle the mob if they break loose.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bedwetting. There is constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Sumners, box W, Norrio Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child the chances are that it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

WHAT IS THE REASON?

The sudden activity on the part of the Grand Trunk Railroad to get a tide water terminal, in Boston, is tending many to think that there is something back of the scheme other than the building of a new road. New Hampshire and Portsmouth would gladly welcome the Grand Trunk to Portsmouth where a harbor terminal of the greatest description could be made, but why the Grand Trunk is looking for a new terminal in Boston is puzzling, when it is considered that they already have harbor terminals in Portland and New London which are hardly developed.

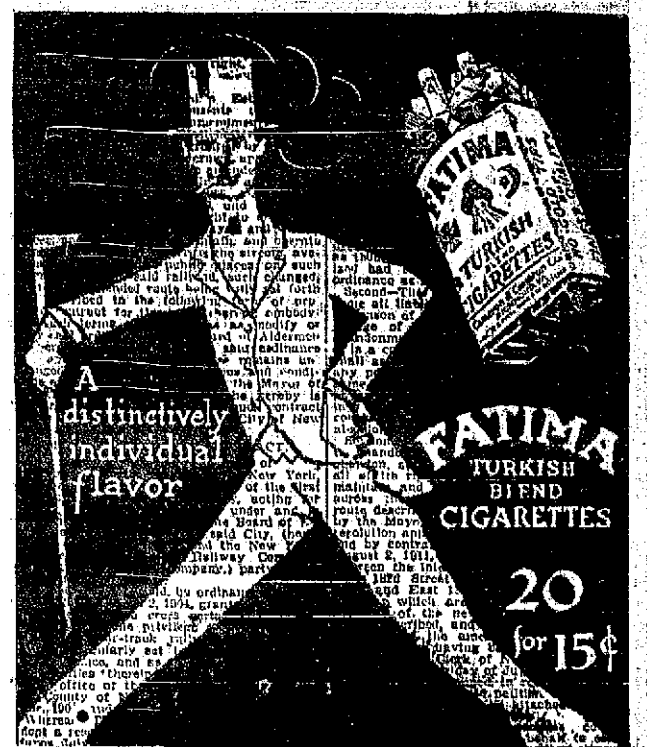

To allow the Grand Trunk to build a parallel line with the Concord and White River Junction, the old Northern (a road not paying expenses) would be an injustice to the Boston and Maine railroad, who now maintain double track road from Concord to Boston, which is not fully developed. There seems to be enough railroads but too little business now. Whatever the solution of the matter be, if the Grand Trunk wants a real first class terminal with the best of natural facilities, Portsmouth is wide open to the officials of that road and would welcome an inspection of its wonderful facilities.

TAFT'S RENOMINATION ASSURED

Those who have watched the career of President William H. Taft, since he assumed the duties of chief executive of this great nation, are warm in their praise of his honesty and impartial performance of his duties. Those who know him are not backward in saying that he is without exception one of the ablest and most fair minded men that has ever held the position. In all his previous positions in government service, he has been most careful, striving to do his duty without fear of favor. He has, as president, directed the government along the lines of a safe and sane, progressive policy; in fact, he has instituted more real reforms with less talk than any previous president. He has actually done things, and without publicity bureau or brass band.

The citizens of New Hampshire regardless of political faith, are friends of President Taft, because they believe in his unswerving duty to the people at all times. Some people do not agree with him, but they do not hesitate to say that he is doing what honestly believes is for the best interest of the whole people. No republican in New England who believes in right and justice can be against Mr. Taft for renomination. The people of the country owe it to him to endorse his present administration, which has been clean and progressive. The Chronicle believes that all factions in New Hampshire will work for Taft's renomination, because he deserves it and because it is the duty of the party to give its unqualified endorsement to all efficient officials of the government. There are some interests in the country that believe that Taft is too aggressive and too antagonistic, and they have dared to say that they prefer Mr. Roosevelt.

This, in short time, will prove to be a mistaken idea. Mr. Taft is in favor of what is right and what is best for the people, and if there are those who are not doing what is not best for the greatest number they are at fault and the wrong should be corrected. The past three years of Mr. Taft's administration, when carefully analyzed will prove conclusively that he has been "The Man of the Hour." Mr. Taft's greatest fault was in his lack of judgment in the selection of his cabinet, but that does not prove that the President is inefficient. The fact is, he is bigger than his cabinet. He is in need of more men of the MacVeigh type, and in the next four years of his administration people will look for him to improve in his official family.

The man with the toe pick is now very much in evidence, more so than the man with the hoe.

The Portland Express says: Good advice is all right in its place, but Portland's poor people are much more in need of fuel and food. The same is true in Portsmouth.

In anticipation of becoming a Grand Trunk terminal Boston is making a great splurge over itself as a shipping port. It is calling on the Legislature for an appropriation of $1,000,000, in addition to the $3,000,000 already appropriated for port improvements and is revelling in imaginary stories of commercial development. And yet it remains true that the location of Portland as a shipping center is unrivalled, and that is port has advantages not to be equaled on the Atlantic coast—Portland Argus.

Perhaps our Massachusetts and Maine brethren may later learn that there is a cat in the meal and that the Grand Trunk is making some what of a splurge. While we admit that orland has a good harbor, we must respectfully call attention to the fact that Portsmouth's harbor has natural advantages not possessed by any on the Atlantic coast.

If it is true that Maine farmers are holding back large quantities of potatoes for even higher prices, they must be considerably interested just now in the proposition to remove for six months the 25 cents a bushel tariff on potatoes. Scotland raised last year 30 per cent. more than an average crop and it has not potatoes to burn, it certainly has them to sell.—Portland Express.

It may also be of interest to a man in a neighboring town who last fall refused all offers for his potatoes and stored three hundred bushels away, stating that he was going to hold them until he got $1.50 per bushel.

The members of the state tax commission at the sessions held at Concord this week cautioned selectmen that the provisions of the law would be rigidly enforced and that if they should learn, if in any place there had been a mistake, they would order a reassessment, and if that failed prosecute the selectmen. The commission is to insist that all property owners receive inventories and that the selectmen require filling out the same, and in all cases, if the selectmen suspect a person of owning taxable property and not returning an inventory or making a false statement of his property, they shall doom him to a fine. They were also instructed to make every effort to get intangibles, such as mortgages of six per cent. or more, whether the mortgage property is situated in New Hampshire or elsewhere, bonds, money on hand or loaned at interest, etc. Timber lands should be taxed at full value whether it works a hardship or not, but it is fair to discount for the time it will take growing timber to mature and the cost of marketing, etc. The selectmen are liable to a penalty of $200 for failure to enforce the provisions of the law.

Gleanings From Files of Portsmouth Chronicle

It will be seen by our advertising columns that the Concord and Portsmouth Railroad have declared a dividend of $1.50 per share, which is payable at the office of Maj. Wm. H. Hackett in this city on Tuesday next, Jan. 21. This dividend we are informed is made from the rent of the road up to the close of the year 1861, the new lease having commenced on the first day of the present year. We are glad to know that the travel over this road since the opening of the Manchester branch has largely increased.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES.

Heroes

The awards of the Carnegie hero fund, now announced, are especially interesting because of the considerable number of recipients in New England. These are conferred in each case in recognition of the valor displayed in the risk of life to save others in peril. It forms a memorable list.

As might be expected, here in New England it is largely the perils of the sea and of interior waters that have inspired heroic rescues. No less than five of the medals and the pecuniary awards are given to fishermen of Edgartown who took their lives in their hands to bring to land occupants of disabled vessels in furious storms on that coast. Careless venturing of skaters upon insecure ice has furnished other incidents.

Perhaps the most sensational are the cases of Mrs. Della R. Powers of Rockdale, who saved a child from an approaching railroad train, and that of William A. Norman of Pittsfield, who lost his life when stopping a team of runaway horses. Mrs. Powers receives a medal and a substantial sum towards the purchase of a home; the widow and children of Norman receive pensions.

The distribution of this fund is perhaps the most practical, inspiring and educational of the several beneficent undertakings to which Mr. Carnegie devotes his wealth.—Boston Post.

Pause and Consider.

Just four years after the close of the second American occupation of Cuba the Department of State has issued to the authorities at Havana a warning that may prove preliminary to a third occupation, though it is not necessary as yet to consider this radical action inevitable. Last summer the United States warned Cuba against thoughtless extravagance; now it offers it a timely hint against military politics. The present situation seems to have been created in the main by the activity of the Association of the Veterans of the War for Cuban Independence, which has adopted a policy of "position to all former Spanish sympathizers in public office. That this is not the sum total of their aspirations, however, is indicated by the fact that although many members of the Spanish party have held office for years only recently has any such protest been seriously made. At this a presidential year in Cuba it is shrewdly suspected that the ambition of General Nunez to succeed President Gomez has something to do with the disaffection of the veterans.

The Cuban Government has further cause for complaint in the participation of Army officers and members of the Rural Guards in the meetings of the disaffected patriots, a custom contrary to law that has been permitted. Evidently the authorities at Washington are of the opinion that a situation of real seriousness has been created, though President Gomez declares that there is no need of alarm. The Government he insists is simply able to deal with any existing difficulties. Nevertheless an impression has gone abroad that the warning issued from Washington is not displeasing to him. This warning it is supposed, will strengthen his hands, although it is conceivable that it might have the opposite effect. The best hope for a peaceful solution of the whole problem lies in the fact that neither party would relish another American invasion. If the United States were to send troops and ships to Cuba for a third time there is no telling when they would be withdrawn, indeed, there is a pretty general feeling that this would result in an indefinite not to say permanent occupation.

Our right to concern ourselves in the affairs of the island is based on the treaty of 1904, which provides that we may intervene to preserve Cuban independence, to maintain a Government adequate for the protection of life, property and liberty and to discharge the obligations put upon us by the treaty of Paris. In a word this country is responsible for the political and financial integrity of Cuba and the policy of the Taft Administration appears to be to forestall more serious trouble by taking each difficulty in time. Occupation may or may not follow the hint that has been offered to Havana. If such a step should be necessary there could be no doubt of its immediate technical success. The island Government has no force able to cope with the ships and men that Washington would promptly utilize to make its intervention effective. Practically the entire Atlantic fleet has its present base at Guantanamo while the Army is prepared for just this emergency and a numerous body of troops could be landed in Cuba, it is estimated in four days. But the formidable character of our military and naval equipment is likely to give the contending factions pause.—Providence Journal.

Maine people will read with interest, the statement in the President's message that his economy commission recommends the abolition of the revenue cutter service in order to effect an estimated saving of a million and a half dollars each year. Of course, the recommendation is coupled with the assurance that the work now done by the cutter service can be as well carried on by other agencies, and it is on this point that the people in the coastwise states will demand to be shown.

The revenue cutter service has a long and honorable record. Originally intended to secure the enforcement of revenue laws, it has since made the work of assisting merchant vessels in times of distress one of its chief duties. Dwellers along the coast of New England do not need to be told of the service of the cutters. The hardy people who wring a livelihood from the sea in the months when the coast is rimmed with ice and the storms of blinding snow are frequent reminders of the value of the cutter service. To them the white vessels and their trained crew are friends indeed. In recent years, as larger and stancher ships have been added to the fleet, the scope of the work has been broadened and the cutters have been sent to far distant points in endeavors to save life and property. While the President's message was being read in congress, two of the vessels of the fleet were rushing at top speed to Newfoundland waters for the purpose of rescuing American fishing craft imprisoned in the ice. The cutters have also, in recent years added to their duties that of freeing the ocean of derelicts and in this work some notable achievements have been recorded.

Quite Right.

Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty's efforts to drive out the impostors who as fortune tellers of "professors" of some other phase of occult deception ply a swindling trade are no doubt deserving of praise. What is there about a few stripes of tawdry Oriental drapery and the agent fumes of incense that can fool people the belief that with these accoutrements "professors" or "seers" who can hardly read and write can peer into the future, "decipher the scroll of destiny" and outline their clients' fate?

ton, New York, San Francisco, Chicago, New Orleans, Baltimore and Philadelphia. Such is the recommendation of President Taft's commission on economy and efficiency, based on the grounds of saving the government the mere pittance of $43,410. The naval office at Boston has a payroll of $36,230, and the naval officer receives a salary of $5000 per annum. The Washington "reformers" claim that the work of the naval officers is largely a duplication of the work of the collectors of the port, and further intimate that in many cases the office has been used largely for political purposes. We don't know how much truth there is in these charges, but we venture to suggest that there will be deep regret among New Hampshire politicians of both parties, if the naval office at Boston is abolished, for this plum although located in Massachusetts has by general consent for years been enjoyed by some New Hampshire man, who has been faithful in the service of his party. During President Cleveland's last administration, the naval office was in charge of the late Judge Charles F. Stone of Laconia, and we think the late Hon. Henry O. Kent of Lancaster held the place during Cleveland's first administration. The naval officer may perhaps not be overburdened with official duties, but he has always been a mighty handy fellow to have around to assist in the post-prandial exercises at banquets, and in the case of the present incumbent, Hon. James O. Lyford, has strenuously endeavored to fill the position of chief party pacifier, during equally and stormy political periods which have prevailed to quite an extent in New Hampshire, while the new Republican political machine has been endeavoring to supplant the old Republican political machine. Col. Jim has not only been a faithful naval officer, but an ornament to Boston society, reflecting credit upon New Hampshire, and the Laconia Democrat bluntly confesses that it will bitterly oppose the abolishment of his position, on merely mercenary grounds.—Laconia Democrat.

The Observer

It may be cold. But don't hesitate to get a plentiful supply of fresh air every day. It is health, and life. Remember the fate of the Indians. When they lived in tents they were hardy people. After the government built them houses, and put stoves into the house, they fell victims of tuberculosis. The lack of fresh air, which they suffered when in houses, weakened them. We cannot go back to the ways of the savage and live in tents. But we can gain a sufficient supply of fresh air and maintain our vitality. Of course the best way to get fresh air to go out of doors and take a vigorous walk. It may seem cold at first. But after the blood begins to warm, the body glows with heat, and then one feels the confidence of health. There are a number of very good ways of ventilating rooms, without having cold drafts blow through them. Then there is this common habit of keeping the windows of sleeping rooms open at night and the slowly growing habit of sleeping out of doors. Generally speaking the more fresh and pure air a person can breathe into the lungs during a day, the healthier he is. So go out of doors as much as possible even if the weather is cold. And if you cannot go out, be sure and open a window and get some fresh air at intervals during the day, and also during the night.

Night was coming on, the storm was increasing and some of the deck fittings had already been swept overboard, when the captain decided to send up a distress signal. The rocket was already lit and about to ascend when a solemn faced passenger stepped. "Cap'n" said he, "I'd be the last man on earth to cast a damper on man's patriotism; but seems to me this here's no time for celebratin' an' settin' off fireworks."—The Christian Herald.

The Lowell Sun well says: What is the most important thing in a business office? Why, a typewriter, of course. Now as the word typewriter is sometimes used with an ambiguous meaning we hasten to remark that in this instance the word typewriter will designate an inanimate writing machine made of steel; not an animate writing and talking machine made chiefly of chewing gum, puffs, peal-a-boo hostery, and various other paraphernalia too numerous and mysterious to mention. However, this latter form of "typewriter" with emphasis on the "form" is also of some importance to prove it. The chaos that would descend upon a modern business office were all its typewriters to be out of order at the same time is too terrible to contemplate. In the first place their operators would immediately depart on probably a shopping excursion for "five and ten." The boss on seeing his correspondence overflow his rollog, would cuss with impotent rage, the office boy, knowing that without letters copy presses need not be run, would smile inwardly a smile of diabolic glee. The young gentleman clerks would complacently manœuvre their fingers and wait with wonderful patience for new typewriters to arrive and the janitor, angelic creature, would in the service, aided with a monkey wrench for a consideration. These are but a few of the happenings which would disrupt the office routine. If you wish for others ask any young woman whose profession is that of tickling the metallic discs for fifteen per cent Saturday afternoons off. Among press telegraphers a typewriter is known as a "mill." No doubt some humorous knight of the key copied the synonym at the end of his seven to nine hours' trick in grinding out copy to appease the omnivorous news appetite of the telegraph editor.

The death of Nathan W. Lear, the early part of the week, removes a citizen who took a deep interest in all matters pertaining to our city. Although a native of New Castle, Mr. Lear had made his home in this city for many years, being for a long time employed as a clerk in the grocery store conducted by the late Samuel W. Moses in what is now known as the Globe building. The writer, then a boy, became acquainted with Mr. Lear and the friendship commenced in early youth continued up to the time of the appointed day. Mr. Lear was largely instrumental in settling together the notable group of aged residents who were photographed on the old Court house steps, one Thanks giving morning, a few years ago, by the veteran photographer Lafayette V. Newell. For several weeks prior interviewed many of our older residents on the subject and was largely instrumental in securing the large turnout of our older citizens on this occasion. Since the picture was taken the two eldest of the group, James B. Butler and Benjamin M. Parker have passed over to the other shore, as well as Daniel Mason, Andrew J. Moran, George P. Abbott, Edward J. Moulton and others, who were well known figures on our streets in by gone days.

The meeting of the state tax commission at Concord, this week in conjunction with the assessors from the various counties has formed an important topic and many persons in this city have wondered what effect it would have on their taxes. They have no cause to feel worried as at the session Secretary Fellows of the state tax commission took occasion to compliment the local board of assessors on their system of assessment. He said that the state commission had no fault to find with the manner in which the work was done in Portsmouth and he thought that it would be well for the assessors in some of the other cities and towns in the state to visit Portsmouth and adopt the system now in vogue here. Praise coming from such a source, as to the efficiency of their work, should be very gratifying to the local board of assessors.

What Is Happening in the Harbor Town

Mrs. Frank Fuller is making an extended visit to her son in Lynn, Mass. The many friends of Miss Mary Mansfield will be glad to learn that she is now fast improving, after her long and serious illness.

Willard Emery is again able to be out after an illness.

Is this the January thaw? If so, long may she wave. Simon "puro" "old fashioned winter" has reigned supreme for the past three weeks, and as a consequence there are more cases of sickness in town than at any time for years.

Mark Bray has abandoned his milk route through the village.

Thanks to the thawing weather of the past two days, cars on the A. S. R. R. are again able to run on schedule time.

George Smallwood of Portsmouth was a visitor in town on Friday.

Clifford Call was a recent visitor to the poultry show in Dover.

Morton Seawards has been appointed janitor at the Fire Company's building.

Stella Hutchins, who has been critically ill at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hutchins, is now reported much improved in condition. Charles Bedell is hauling coal for Frisbee Brothers, their own team not being able to supply the demand.

The senior class of Trapepe Academy will give a dance at Wentworth all on Friday evening next.

Arthur Gunnison was a recent visitor at the Dover poultry show.

ALL YOU NEED IS A CASCARET TONIGHT

No Sick Headache, Bilious Stomach, Coated Tongue or Constipated Bowels By Morning.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, the biliousness, the indigestion, the sick, sour stomach, and foul gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

"A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10 cent box from any drug store means a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Children love to take Cascarets because they taste good—never gripes or sickens."

It was settled by the defendant giving bonds to pay rent. The attorney were Eastman, Scammon and Gardner of Exeter for the plaintiff, and Messrs. Wright and Smart of Rochester for the defendant.

The case of Alice J. Fogg against Ralph E. Meras of Exeter, who was to have defended himself in the case and not employ counsel but as the plaintiff came to terms out of court, Mr. Meras was deprived the opportunity of appearing before the court. A Guilty Conscience

It Needs No Accuser

By RODMAN BIRCH

On my return trip from London my hand baggage was carried to my stateroom by a steward. Unrolling my rug, what was my astonishment to find within its folds a large quantity of the finest grade of ice and within the folds of the lace a chamel bag full of jewels.

I examined the rug carefully and discovered that though the same color as mine—a dark blue—it was not so much worn. A close inspection of the sham strap showed that it was not mine. It was plain that in the transition from the station to my stateroom my rug had been exchanged for this one. The only details of this theory I could supply were that the rug had been dumped together on the steamer deck and later carried to their supposed respective staterooms. The one that had come to me had no tag on it, which considering its valuable contents, amazed me. Indeed, I was surprised that the owner should have permitted it to go out of his possession.

I rolled up the bundle as I had found it, strapped it and instead of going on deck went to the smoking room to think out the problem of its owner ship. I proceeded methodically and after the fashion of detectives. The fact that the package was not tagged indicated that the owner did not care to have his name on it—that is, he intended to keep it in his own possession. Evidently the goods were to be smuggled, and the smuggler on board the ship, finding himself suspected, had desired to temporarily get rid of it. Doubtless he had seen heaps of hand

I FELT SURE THAT HE WAS MY QUARRY. The man on the deck and when unobserved had tossed it on one of these heaps. Then his attention had been attracted, and either he was unable to locate the pile on which he had thrown it or it was picked up and carried away before he could again get possession of it.

It remained for me to account on this theory for my not having both my own and this other rug in my possession. I theorized in this way: The smuggler having dropped his rug on my pile of hand baggage, finding an opportunity to take it up without being observed, had picked up mine instead of his own.

I was well satisfied with my explanation and, having settled the cause of the episode in my mind, began to think about the outcome. It struck me at once that there was enough in it to keep me interested all the way across. The smuggler having lost his property, would take measures to recover it. What measures? I confess that were I in his place I would consider a search for my valuable like looking for a needle in a haystack. I, too, would be on the watch for him. Indeed, this phase of the question promised to be very interesting. I found him and he was a good fellow I would return his property without asking any questions. If he acted disagreeably—well, I could be disagreeable too. I knew some of the customs men in New York, and what I might do I could determine before meeting them.

I made a number of acquaintances on the steamer, and with one party—a gentleman named Stoneman, his wife and two daughters—I became quite intimate. They were wealthy and had been seeing Europe extensively. After pledging them to secrecy I told them that there was a matter I would confide to them which might interest them—a problem that I would like their assistance in solving. I then told them about the error which had thrown a valuable property into my possession and invited them to observe our fellow passengers with a view to determining the rightful possessor.

Mr. Stoneman didn't take to the matter at all, cautioning me that it might get me into trouble. His wife coincided with him in this opinion, and their daughter, though interested, did not show any disposition to take an active part in my investigations after her parents' disapprobation of such a course.

However, the oldest Miss Stoneman, being of an age to be attracted by such a curious circumstance, the next day pointed out to me a man pacing the deck whom she said she thought might be the smuggler. She had been watching him, and he looked very uneasy. She was sure he had something on his mind. The moment I looked at him I was of the same opinion. Moreover, he stared at me as I passed him. I wondered if he could know that I was in possession of the valuables.

After that Miss Stoneman and I, having a secret together, spent considerable time in each other's company, sitting on deck together. The man she had pointed out walked the deck much of the time, and whenever he passed us, would look at us uneasily. I felt sure that he was my quarry. I asked Miss Stoneman how she came to light upon the man so quickly, and she said she didn't know herself. I told her it was that unaccountable power of intuition which women possess in lieu of the reasoning power of men.

But if the fellow knew that I had his property he took no steps, so far as I could see, to possess himself of it. Every time he passed me he looked at me harder than before, and I seemed to have a very disturbing effect upon him. One evening I approached the stern of the ship. Some one was looking over the railing, but I did not notice who he was. Suddenly he looked up at me. He was the smuggler.

"I can stand this no longer," he said. "I know you are from Scotland Yard, and I may as well give myself up first as last."

"How do you know that?" I asked, not wishing to commit myself.

"It was that young lady who put you on to me. It's wonderful how these women can know things."

"Well, are you ready to confess?"

"Will I gain anything by confession?"

"Certainly. I'll see to that."

"Well, I lost the money on the stock exchange."

"This was a surprise, but I kept my countenance."

"Then it is all gone?"

"Every cent. I can't gain anything by restoration."

The plot was thickening. In looking for the owner of the property I held, I had stumbled on a criminal. I did not propose to mix myself up in this second affair, one was enough, so I said:

"My friend, you have made a mistake. I'm no Scotland Yard man, and I have no interest in your crime. Why have you been staring at me?"

"Why have you been staring at me?" he asked, with great apparent relief.

I did not satisfy him. He had a guilty conscience, which Miss Stoneman had observed, so the moment we looked at him curiously he took it for granted he had been spotted. I told him I would not give him away, for which he thanked me. I didn't think it prudent to trust Miss Stoneman with his secret, so I told her that I had discovered that he was the wrong man.

Our last day of the voyage came, and I was at a loss to know what to do with the lace and the diamonds. I spoke to my confidante about my property, and she suggested that so long as I had nothing to fear from the customs officers I might carry the package about as it was. After doing so the rightful owner might claim it, and then it would be time enough to decide what action to take. I replied that the rug would probably be unraveled and examined by the customs officers, whereupon she offered to take the lace and diamonds ashore herself.

Since she seemed inclined to this plan I reluctantly consented to it, yet fearing that if she got into trouble I would be blamed. Her object seemed to be to serve me, though I fancied she supposed in case the property remained with me she would fall heir to a part of it for getting it through free of duty. I handed it over to her, and she must have concealed it well, for she took it through without being discovered.

The criminal who had mistaken me for a Scotland Yard man did not fare so well. Officers who had been called that he was on the steamer took him in charge as he left the vessel.

When I parted from the Stonemans the mother gave me a pressing invitation to call upon them in New York before they departed for home, which they expected to do in a few days after landing. I called on them at their hotel and was graciously received.

Since my attentions to Miss Stoneman on the steamer had been noticed, presently the others one by one excused themselves and left us alone together.

"Well," said the young lady, "have you discovered the owner of the property?"

"No one has applied for it."

"Probably not, since it is mine."

"Yours?"

"Yes."

I looked at her agast. "You have no need to smuggle."

"It's the fascination of it. I was bound to get those things through free of duty. When we went aboard the ship I got a fright. I saw the man I pointed out to you looking at me while I was carrying my rug. I dropped it and failed to find it again. That's all I know about it till you told us it had found its way into your stateroom."

"There were two of you," I said, laughing, "with a guilty conscience, though one was a thief, the other only a smuggler, which seems to be quite fashionable among the upper classes just now."

"So it seems."

"There is nothing more to the story except that in time I married the girl who had fooled me. She has been feeling me ever since."

His Avenger

Later Events Showed a Mistake

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The men of the Lone Bull ranch had finished supper and were gathered about the long table over newspapers and cards. Most of them were smoking, and the air was blue with the exhalations from pipes and cigarettes.

The Chinese cook slipped into the room noiselessly. He addressed the company impartially in a high, complaining voice:

"Him, Hally Bally, no come eat chow; him sabe I keep chow yelly hot till him come around!"

Harry Barry's seven comrades fixed piercing eyes on the cook. Gabriel spoke, smothering a yawn with one lean hand before he did so.

"I guess he sabe you'll keep his supper hot for him, Lee. If you don't," he paused significantly, and the wrathful Chinaman found seven blue-muzzled revolvers focused upon different parts of his anatomy.

"Understand?" snapped Gabriel.

Lee's straw slippers slipped restlessly on the bare floor. His frightened, beseeching eyes roved from one to another of the stern faces. He added his head like a toy mandarin. "Yes, yes, I sabe yelly, yelly much!"

"You will keep Mr. Barry's supper hot for him?"

"Velly hot!" said Lee forcibly. "As hot as—"

And he named the hottest place there is.

The seven were still shaking with silent laughter over the episode when there came the rapid thud of small hoofs and the Widow Clancy slipped from her saddle at the door and stood before them.

"Where is Harry Barry?" she demanded in a low, intense voice. All the pretty color had fled from her face, and her pallor was enhanced by the vivid auburn of her lovely hair.

"Where is Harry Barry?" she repeated as they arose and clustered around her.

"We've been expecting him every minute. He oughter been back long ago," drawled Gabriel.

"Maybe his horse went lame," suggested the Crane from the background. One or two others offered suggestions as to the probable cause of Harry Barry's absence even while they expected to witness his dashing arrival at any instant. At last they stood mutely before the pale widow and waited for her to speak again.

"You're a clever lot of fabricators!" she sneered.

A look of concern came into Gabriel's face. "You don't think he's got into any trouble, Mrs. Clancy?" he asked quickly.

"As if you didn't know!" Her voice trembled with grief and anger. "As if you didn't know! What has he done that you—the men that he called his mates, his friends—yes, every one of you—what has he done that you should string him to the tallest cottonwood at the springs?"

"What?" thundered Gabriel, pushing forward. "Harry Barry hanging—where did you say?" The seven who loved the merry hearted comrade whose grave danger had caused them alarm on another occasion listened with white faces while Mrs. Clancy explained in a shaking voice:

"I saw him myself. His horse was staked under the tree. I was a quarter of a mile off when I happened to see him dangling up there in the tree. She hid her face in her hands and sobbed."

"I was looking for a lost critter and had my fieldglasses," Mrs. Clancy said Gabriel heavily, for he loved Harry like a younger brother, "there is some mistake. You can count on the seven of us to avenge Harry if harm has come to him."

"I am his avenger," said Mrs. Clancy coldly. "I want you seven to come along with me."

The seven silently obeyed more from pity for the agitated woman than because they were fearful of her threats. Harry Barry's comrades were grief-stricken at the disaster that had overtaken their friend. What could he have done to have merited the severest penalty of that unprotected country, where justice is swiftly meted out wherever it is outraged, with the dome of heaven for a courtroom and the victims for judge and jury?

Crane, who was leading the file, turned and spoke to Gabriel, who was next. "You remember once before we were hauled out to save Harry, the time when we got the letter about the Last Hope?"

"Sure," returned Gabriel, "and we found that the Last Hope was the name of a mine he'd discovered. Maybe there ain't anything in this either." He smiled hopefully.

The Widow Clancy's voice came nervously shrill from the rear. "Laugh, will you?" she cried. "One of you laugh again and I'll put a—b-bullet—through—y-y-you!" She suddenly broke into tears and bowed her head on the peak of her pony. Gabriel was beside her in an instant.

"You're mistaken, Mrs. Clancy," he said soothingly. "We was only remembering that Harry saved us once before. You remember we're told you about the Last Hope mine and how we rode all night chasing that boy only to find him alive and well at the end of the trip, and we can't help but think there's some mistake now and that Harry can't be done away with."

"But I saw him!" cried the widow plaintively. "I saw him there, his head drooping. Oh, it was awful!"

"We think—well, sure that he wouldn't do one of the things he'd have to hang for," was Gabriel's earnest assurance.

"Of course he wouldn't!" Mrs. Clancy lifted her tear stained face and turned drenched blue eyes upon him. Gabriel was relieved. To see the spongy little widow giving way to grief was so foreign to her disposition that he was alarmed.

"Maybe you'd like to wait here while we go and investigate," he suggested, but the widow was firm in her determination to be on the spot.

"You ain't used to such scenes, ma'am," protested Crane mildly, for they had paused to discuss the question.

"I may as well get used to it—if it kills me," declared Mrs. Clancy, and then, fixing glowing eyes upon each in turn, she said earnestly: "I want you to understand I appreciate you've been good friends to me ever since I came from the east, and I know you've always been good friends to Harry, but if I'm convinced that his being up there is your fault—why, the whole seven of you will hang for it if I have to do it myself!"

The widow looked perfectly capable of engineering any number of lynchings at that moment.

Absurd as was the situation from one point of view, there was this tragedy in the background, and it was a grave preoccupied party that swung around the last hill as the sun dropped its lower rim below the horizon.

A yellow shaft of sunlight struck the cottonwoods, and from the tallest one something dangled from a stout upper limb.

"Don't you look, ma'am—wait till we come back," commanded Gabriel with sudden authority, and he pressed a flask into her hand.

The brave hearted little widow suddenly lost courage and bowed her head once more on the neck of her pony.

When the seven pounded to a standstill under the cottonwood tree they slipped from their saddles and hesitated. Harry Barry's roan horse whinnyed sharply, and then, apparently from the air above them, came a familiar voice, peevish, as if from long waiting.

"Don't stand staring like idiots! I'm plain tired out hanging up here!" It said.

The seven turned awed looks upon one another, and as by one accord the youngest and strongest, the two Lewises, Jim and Tim, sprang toward the tree and fairly spurred their way up into the lower branches, from which they mounted higher. Then there came the sound of several voices raised in inquiry, explanation and direction.

After awhile they came down the tree instead of the two who had climbed up. The third man was Harry Barry, and the others were helping him, for his limbs seemed stiff and his face was quite pale. He smiled as cheerily as ever as they gathered around him.

"Another one on me," he grinned sheepishly when they had administered restoratives to him. "I was coming back from dosing the sick critter, when I took a notion to climb that there tree and look around the hind and see if there was anybody I knew sashaying around—laugh if you want!" he said as a knowing smile went the round of the group.

"I went up in the tree, and I looked, and I thought I saw way off an old friend of mine," he showed all his white teeth, "and so I was in a hurry to get down, and my heel caught in a crooked little branch, and I fell kerplunk till a handy little stump of a broken limb caught hold of my belt, and there I hung as fine as silk. That was all beautiful and nice, only gents, it was so that there was a sharp little prongy branch sticking out of the tree right behind my shoulders, and I couldn't move hand or foot without catching it like a knife, so there I hung till I went to sleep a while back. When I woke up I was all numb and cold from hanging there. I'm feeling better now, thanks. Next thing I knew I heard you fellows coming and seen you 'out the corner of my eye.'"

They examined the small ragged tear in Harry's shirt between his shoulder blades, and they saw that the flesh was red and bruised from the torturing branch that had pierced it.

"You had a narrow escape," said Gabriel soberly.

"I guess you won't get to breaking no laws now," joked Gem Wayland. "You've somehow got a taste of what a necktie party feels like when you're the guest of honor."

Crane had ridden ahead to break the good news to Mrs. Clancy, and Gabriel suddenly vaulted into his saddle and wheeled about. "We chaps better be making for the Lone Bull. Lee's keeping your supper hot for you, Harry!"

"And there's a lady waiting around the corner for you," added Jim Lewis over his shoulder as he followed Crane. "A lady—who-ah!" The question died on Harry Barry's lips as the Widow Clancy's little pony dashed toward the cottonwood tree, bearing a slender, erect figure, with an aureole of auburn hair and dancing blue eyes. There was no lack of color in her cheeks as she saw the stalwart form of Harry.

"Gosh! Let's get out of this!" gasped Jim Lewis as he followed the rest of the seven in their mad dash to escape the tender scene that would follow.

"Let's go home and see Lee has supper plenty hot for them," suggested Gabriel, and soon the faithful seven were dim dots on the twilight plain.

Following them in the mystic light came Harry Barry and his sweetheart, riding slowly, hand in hand.
